To whom it may concern,

My husband and I recently purchased our first home in Los Angeles with the incredible assistance of our trusted broker, Jory Burton. I had known Jory for several years prior through mutual business contacts, and had always heard of his knowledge and professionalism, so when we decided to relocate from New York City to LA, we knew we would be in great hands engaging him.

To say we were in great hands would be a gross understatement when it comes to Jory. Not only did he have a difficult set of circumstances that he expertly worked through (we had found a house that we had to move extremely quickly on in a multiple bidding situation, we were in NYC and much more...) but he also was incredibly patient, thorough and informative as we went through the process for the first time - from 3000 miles away.

Jory's knowledge of the Los Angeles real estate market and all of the nuances of making a deal are unmatched, he is tough when he needs to be and does not skip a beat when it comes to his clients. He is clearly passionate about his job, we very much appreciated him becoming personally invested in us and doing what it took to get the best possible deal done on our behalf. He is incredibly detail oriented and dexterously navigated the post accepted-offer process by our side. Jory was always available and accessible to us, I joked with him several times that I truly felt like I was his only client (which I knew to be far from the truth). He was realistic and straightforward and he got us everything we wanted and more.

It is rare to find a service provider who operates at the highest level in both skill AND dedication. Jory demonstrates that rare combination. I would highly recommend Jory to any business contact, family member or friend. I believe he is the best real estate broker in the world and I look forward to working with him for many years to come.

Sincerely,

Lauren Auslander Hill
